THE SINCLAIR ZX SPECTRUM-3 WITH 6 FREE GAMES AND A JOYSTICK.

ADVANTAGE.

ZX SPECTRUM +3. £199

The new Sinclair ZX Spectrum +3 is a real hero – because it helps you to be one.

While you're a daring motorbike rider or the all-conquering intergalactic warrior, you're gaining priceless experience in handling computers.

Loading games is quick and easy with the built-in disk drive. You'll be in the thick of the action in seconds. And the fantastic 128K memory gives you the power to outsmart the most sophisticated enemy.

Get to grips with the latest high-tech graphics on the vast universe of games available (six of which come free). And there's a free joystick to give you ultimate control.

But the real hero is the person who buys it. For the ZX Spectrum +3 is only £199, so they've really saved the earth.

ZX SPECTRUM +2. £139

The amazing ZX Spectrum +2 has a built-in data-coder – to save you the bother of tape recorders and loads. The advanced 128K memory helps you get the most from the vast universe of games available.

Every model comes complete with six free games to start you off, and a free joystick to make you super agile.

With the advanced Sinclair technology you can afford to let your imagination go wild. Because at £139, only your enemies pay tribute.

BE WHO YOU WANT TO BE.

Available at: Adams, Bells, Computers, Connet, Connors, Curry, Deane, John Lewis, John Menzies, Lasky, Sainsbury, Smith, Vassinos, Wright, and all good independent dealers.

Recommended retail price: Sinclair ZX Spectrum +3 (including all games) £199; Sinclair ZX Spectrum +2 (including all games) £139. Prices subject to change without prior notice.

ATARI USER SHOW

THREE action-packed days for Atari owners!

The spectacular Alexandra Palace represents a new showcase for the fastest-growing range of computers on the market.

From the exciting games console to the over-popular 8-bit Atari and the sensational Mega ST, they'll all be there at the Atari User Show!

Some of the very latest software will be on show for the first time.

And that means you can enjoy unique hands-on experience of programs everyone will soon be talking about.

You'll find some of the best prices around for blank discs, disc boxes and other accessories, learn about the many opportunities to expand your computer system, get helpful advice from some of Britain's leading experts, and so much more!

How to get there

It's so easy to get to this place - by car, rail, underground or bus. Alexandra Palace has its own British Rail station, parking visitors to and from King's Cross in just nine minutes. And there's a free bus service circulating between station and show every 10 minutes. If you're travelling by road the drive is only 10 minutes along from junction 21 on the M25 - and off on parking to this.

VALUE DISK DRIVE

ERIKHAM MICRO are proud to be selling a new Amiga computing disk drive for only £29.95. The drive includes a 5.25-inch disk mechanism and a long cable for convenient programming. It's design is small so will be extremely pleasing.

NINTENDO NUMBER ONE

A chart published by the magazine Toy & Hobby World, polled the Nintendo Entertainment System to be the number one best selling 'toy' ranked by units sold for November 1987. Snake's came a close fourth.

THE GIANT AWAKES

ERIKHAM as we go to press with this issue. Decisions in our article on Real Life (page 27) about Nintendo moving heavily into Britain, soon and beginning to come true.

Mattel UK Ltd has announced that NES UK Limited will be handling the marketing and distribution of the Nintendo Entertainment System in the UK, and NES is set for the combination of Real Life and Boy's Own.

The key name here is that of Real Life, because he goes back a long way. He started out in partnership with Alan Stone in 1975 in Seattle as Real Life Video, the company that in 1980 was taken over to become

Nintendo UK America. Alan Stone is now Vice-President International-Commercial Products Division at Nintendo UK America is also heading a wide war for the putting spaces, while Judy was Vice-President of Marketing and sales, but more powerful perhaps with his recent new appointment to Japan.

The move heralds a powerful push to repeat in Britain what Nintendo has achieved in the past three years in the States. NES is already establishing a UK base, and we can expect to see a large TV advertising campaign before much longer, backed up by point-of-sale displays in major stores.

WHOOPS APOLOGIES

ESM stated in the last issue that the North America Show organised by Database Exhibitions was to take place on the 18th of February, when in fact the show opened on the weekend that month. We would like to apologise for any confusion we may have caused and place the blame firmly on the shoulders of a typing error.

ATARI SHOW

DATABASE Exhibitions are holding the Atari show in the West Hall at Exhibition Palace between the 22nd and 24th of April (though). Tickets on the door are £3.00 for Adults and £2.00 for non adults, £1.00 less if paid for in advance.

MARS OPS MISS THEIR LAUNCH WINDOW

MARS OPS, the space port out game from Amiga originally due late last year has hit a few implementation problems and is not likely to appear now until May.

The game has proved to be more ambitious than even Amiga first thought and the Atari ST and Amiga are being pushed hard by the author. With Mars Ops being delayed, Amiga's major drive into the 16-bit market will now be played by Powerplay, the game of the Gods.

A SUCCESSFUL MOVE

WOMEX, the Welsh based company formed two years ago by Wyn Halloway and his wife Sandra, have recently moved to a new larger facility. The move follows the enormous success of the last Welsh Festival in which the company more than doubled its turnover to over half a million pounds a month.

The opening ceremony was performed on the 15th January by the Mr. Hon. Peter Walker, secretary of state for Wales. Also in attendance was the MP for Merioneth, David. One of the most immediate effects of the move will be extra space and the opportunity for WOMEX to double their exhibition.

ROBOCOP

OCEAN have nabbed the software success for the American blockbuster film, ROBOCOP. However, they're determined that it won't follow in the wake of such disasters as Knight Rider and Highlander, so RoboCop the game is not to be released until September '88 to, A, ensure the gameplay has depth and the general feel of the film, and B, its coincide with the video release.

The film, set in the near future, concerns the violent murder of a police cop who is reborn (based on the cinematic comic figure - RoboCop). It should be an Unlabeled release by the time you read this, although Newsweek staff were lucky enough to be invited to the premiere - from which they returned full of praise for it.

LES PLUS BEAUX JEUX DE MONDE?

The French ERE informatique label, who are currently being distributed in the UK by Infogrammes, have a very impressive trio of forthcoming releases: Cash Garrett, Captain Blood and Get Drifter. £19.95

SBT during the late 1800's, Joseph Garrett threw the player into a melting pot of espionage and intrigue. Europe is becoming steadily more urban, and that spy networks are spreading through the Americas.

The action takes place over two days in May 1938, and starts with Cagney's cynical Cyrus Speed, a former columnist from Mississippi, in the town of Looming. The night seems fine, but ominously, rain is about to descend.

The cover of Unsettled features a photograph of a person's face, partially obscured by a dark, textured overlay.

Real Pumped action stroke

active and passive fun through the game. The action is continuous and is designed to give school with special facilities for Crash programs, the society changes and other elements appear and disappear from view when Crash is in the air.

Both the graphics and sound are very impressive, with a blurry simulated parallax scrolling on the title screen, and superb color-ful backgrounds.

Graphs are available

IN THE AIR TONIGHT

INSPIRED by the 1990s Donkey Kong racing games, Steve Cartwright, who also wrote both Hudson programs and Ayrup (the US version), has created a 3D air racing game. One Man Air Rally features 18 first-person 3D courses which are raced around.

Set for a March release, One Man Air Rally will be available on the Commodore 64/128, Spectrum, Amstrad and Amiga.

MASK RETURNS

PREMIER GRAPHICS' third Mask game is soon to be available on the Spectrum. Commodore 64/128, Amstrad and MSX.

Dubbed Victory Stripes Mask, it features Matt Tucker as he attempts to rescue his son Scott from the evil influence of Miles Muggins, the leader of Victory Mask's Black Ops. Victory Mask is broken into three parts, displaying as much wit as it is possible along the way, and then ends a novel with which to battle Muggins himself. More details when we have them.

TRAILING ALONG

CUTLAW are set to release their second product - Track. Written by Gordon Design, it is intended to be "a slice of pure arcade madness".

Trapped in the wilderness of Mask, a world swamped in terror, madness, you're set against hordes of goblins of various shapes and sizes. In order to crash through one of their flesh shields into another dimension - how easy.

Control shows great difficulties on top of you, but there's no real worry as you can push onto the main and continue the battle upside down. Out in space, there's not too much to Commodore 64/128, Spectrum and Amstrad.

Developer Daniel Beavers. Track is set to be released on the Cutlaw label - best price soon.

PRESENTING THE EQA COLLECTION

ELECTRONIC ARTS have just announced a wealth of interesting releases.

First there's Return to Atlantis, an action-packed jungle adventure written by Mike Welton. This competitive 3D land battle, a race which requires the player to negotiate his different missions. With added sound and great graphics, Return is a completely new concept. It's quite a lot when it's released for the Amiga later this month.

Another interesting Amiga release is Seven Cities of Gold, an expansive adventure game. The story tells of the Spanish exploration of the New World, based upon the tale of seven Vikings who each established a beautiful kingdom there.

Taking the role of an Old Man to adventure, the player sets out on the trail of three hidden gold mines. Using navigation skills, the land is guided around Atlantis and South America, where all manner of hazards and adventures await.

Following the recent release of Fast Drive, Flamestar Arts are set to release another top Amiga-style product. Power At Sea is expected the weeks now in hand from Lights Out. This release involves the role of Captain of the US

Fleet with the task of searching and capturing the fleet, which is currently under enemy control.

Heavily strategy-based, Power At Sea also incorporates four unique battle scenarios - ship to ship, ship to air, air to ship, and ship to land. Being not attacking the enemy, the action shifts to the bridge where the player oversees navigation, communications, fleet status and weapons operations.

Power At Sea is available at the end of the month on the Commodore 64/128 at £14.95 and on the 68k at £19.95.

Also from Accommodate is Card Sharks, which gives

ULTIMATE PLAY THE GAME ULTIMATELY PLAYING A RARE GAME

DESIGNS ON THE FUTURE

Ultimate Play The Game is probably the most famous label in the annals of British computer games. For over three years this mysterious company held absolute sway over the Spectrum charts, and then abruptly retreated and vanished, almost without trace. What happened to them? Was their elusiveness a media ploy? Timely questions, for the people behind Ultimate are about to rise spectacularly from their self-made ashes like phoenixes, and they chose to talk to THE GAMES MACHINE about their past and their resurrection.

Articles and Interview by Roger Kean and Nik Wild. Photographs by Cameron Pound (with thanks to Tim's Hasselblad)

GETTING A FOOT IN THE DOOR

During 1984 and 1985 Ultimate Play The Game, the trading name of Amby Computers and Graphics, was the most sought after interview. Computer magazine journalists and editors clamoured over the phone, and even hammered at the front door, for that all-important exclusive interview. But the harder everyone tried, the more adamant Ultimate became about its press silence. The nearest anyone got to a foot in the door was CRASH. The magazine found some favour with Ultimate's nearly invisible owners, they ran several competitions and even promised an interview – but always only after the next game was completed, and somehow the interview never seemed to happen. Now, for the first time we can reveal some of the past secrets and, more importantly, provide an insight to the future – and the future looks like the Nintendo.

When, in the summer of 1982, two new Spectrum games called Jazzed and Knock appeared quietly on the shelves, it took only a few weeks for the name of Ultimate (Play The Game) to become a household software word. The packaging layout, blocky quality graphics, was clearly related to being the sixth or any other of the time, considering the Spectrum's design limitations. And the amount of graphics and sound fun to be had from either game was on the verge of surpassing the fact that they were each packed into only 16K capacity.

Between 1982 and 1985 Ultimate had an unbroken chain of 14 Spectrum hit games, whose package covers alone sold for three times as much as the 90% making Ultimate the most successful software house in the land. During 1985 they turned, with one exception, to the Commodore 64 market, releasing no games, the last two of which were reissues into their Ballroom (probably Ultimate's best-selling game). Spectrum sales alone, they claim, went over the £100,000 mark – almost unheard of and certainly passing the officially named 250,000 all-format sales mark. Software's Entrepreneur.

FILMATION

Very little was known about Ultimate. Unlike other software houses, the company never ran stands at exhibitions (there was one early exception) made game interviews and generally avoided any form of magazine coverage. It was frustrating to the curious, fans and not magicians (though, surely, the chairman normally attracted to entrepreneur organisations) in the Saturnwell sales went over the 350,000 mark, beating Activision's Ghostbusters.

RAREENGINEERING

The programming — or engineering — area is on the first floor of the large Rare headquarters. The first room is Tim Stamper's graphics office, equipped with several computers, two large drawingboards — one bearing a giant game logo being prepared in expanded pixel form with a title we are not allowed to mention — a video area with studio lights to help with digitising complex three-dimensional shapes and a closed rack containing all the past, famous Ultimate packaging illustrations.

I visit Tim's graphics area. Games — photographed screens of those 32-bit games. Plain text already known for ages, one ending at two years ago, 1991, some 40 minutes. He finished under a long black strip of tape, the camera is rotated. He is not allowed to look at the screen, since Chris is in front of the set, looking at the end of the screen's eye. Closing the games.

Along a corridor there are several rooms: a games office, the play room — equipped with much gaming computer paraphernalia — the music room and a long 32 further software development area.

The main development room, large and airy, has desks, computers and monitors around the room where the software engineers sit. Different types of hardware machines, in whatever way, as well as stacks of cartridges, parts and Nintendo discs. As we entered, a few packages of games had just been delivered from Japan to test on Plan's first PC Engine — the latest machine in the series and all the bugs in the software. The package was ripped open and its contents eagerly looked. The new software arrived in the Japanese Nintendo magazines, the game, and the design. The photographic screen, these appeared on it as much in demand as other software on the GAMES MACHINE.

If looking at some of the engineers, a strange thought occurred: why they are obviously some of the British software scene around here, as though they are in a dark glass. I was often asked questions about the first games in the market, or interested from the room — they listened about them, possibly even took the discs from them, but never looking at the screen. How they work. There is a time machine, as people in a rooming acquaintance with the magazines, but their eyes are fixed on a distant goal, some distant time. Can be, when I asked Tim if he had any interest with other software with the Japanese. It doesn't seem to be much a big difference what you look at the games themselves, but it is obviously a very complex, however, and one in which most of Rare Ltd's resources are being poured.

In this sense, there is no doubt that the Japanese are making the people in the Japanese. It doesn't seem to be much a big difference what you look at the games themselves, but it is obviously a very complex, however, and one in which most of Rare Ltd's resources are being poured.

Like most of the Rare staff, Chris is already known as a director, and Tim Stamper was from one of the top computer magazines in the country.

Nintendo magazines appeared to be as much in demand as either CRASH or THE GAMES MACHINE.

Another game of the Nintendo family, a game called CRASH, is the first thing Tim Stamper is looking at. He is looking at the first page of a new Nintendo magazine, which is a book about the game.

COIN-OPS FOR ALL

The development room is dominated by a veritable forest of standard-issue, 100MHz boxes, full of chips, capacitors, wires, cables and other electronic components. It's a reminder that this company has a vested interest in developing hardware as well as software. In the room next door, engineers showcased their proud achievement of 30 minutes of hard work — the new coin-op game board, working on this day for our benefit.

Named — they always have a name — the Peace Board, built around the 200 processor with a full set of hardware added, it is extraordinarily fast. They had set up a running demo, consisting of large, full-screen images bouncing around the screen to test its rapid image rates, but the individual images, like those seen on moving pictures, took shape as it passed behind another, was being created and redrawn. We were told the board was running 1,000,000 cycles per second.

That is an amazing drawing of all characters, 1000 pixels, which is not machines — like the Amiga — say, Oh, they can do it, too. But that's not a clue to, and this is actually not about a full separation. I think it will enable us to start competing with the top Japanese and American coin-op companies now. The first time we've been in this position to go up against them, and I feel we have a chance of hardware that will allow us to do that. I think it's going to knock spots off MasterSystem and the Amiga coin systems. It means, this is representing this every 100th of a second.

The Peace Board is available to anyone who wants to go into writing games for the coin-op industry. Here, however, the focus is on the graphics and sound effects, and the overall quality is intended to be very powerful, too. Using hardware with which there are no expensive costs, they're not like the expensive costs of graphics, with these 100 there being top of the range quality. Presumably it could be ready any day now, and as Tom said that, they have had a lot of interest in the board from other British companies. Companies that would like a piece of hardware like that, but they'd have to wait to develop it. I mean it's not a fortune to develop, but as you see it's all fully working.

Then there's the graphics side. It's not even half the image of the 100, it's not an unusual image, which will be generated, and it's not a full set of a single character, we want to use it because it's so memory efficient, and we can move back a large amount of memory around quickly.

People with a desire and matching ability to design coin-op games should probably be getting in touch with Hasbro now.

For the camera to capture, the first time we got something more than a few seconds of image. All testing right.

A standard 'typical' (OKAWA) computer spreads from surface to weekly Japanese computer magazines.

I THINK I'M TURNING JAPANESE

Everyone should read the editor of ten million Nintendo machines in Japan's homes had to realize, just take a look at the magazines. Here, readers' bundles of their curiosity from their Japanese contacts. Considering that as one time 1984 British offered advice to freshwater that CHAN, a monthly, single-use, game-only magazine could not survive, it must seem extraordinary to us that in Japanese less than three magazines are published there a week, starting usually with Nintendo's games. They fall, at usually more than 200 pages, each one sends the equivalent of 10, and translations are good. They have the total budget of the enormous amount of on-color screen shots and video illustrations. With perhaps thirty page inserts full jammed with pictures, the (Manga) brothers are convinced that British (and) most certainly the much older American magazines should see a look out of the Japanese book.

INTENDING NINTENDO

In many respects, in Britain Nintendo is still better known for its coin-op profits. The release of home machines and cartridge games has, to date, been disappointing. But as the Star says, Nintendo has been extremely busy in its American market, anything suggested that the Japanese game is only going to make up its British during the next two years. If anyone has doubts about this suggestion is likely to be faced, they should take a look at what has happened in Europe since the early 1980s.

To put the figures in perspective, the Japanese Nintendo Company of Japan reported a net income for the year ending August 1987 of almost £270 million — a 50% increase on their 1986 figure. Net sales were just over £1.1 billion. This sharp improvement is largely attributed to the success of Nintendo of America, now based in Springfield, near Indianapolis, at Redmond, near Seattle, Washington State. Nintendo rather than in Japan, had Nintendo's coin-op games line developed for world-wide distribution, although this is by far the smaller of the two game operations.

It is with the home market that Nintendo began to look amazing. It has become the American leader, with over 60 percent of the market in competing Atari's 10 percent and Sega's eight percent share. This year, Nintendo expects to sell 5000 million worth of consumer products there. They already have figures to show that their games consoles may be found in 40% of every third American home with a new model featured right and 14. And new ranges of games that year are being aimed at a much older bracket — up to age 21.

That Nintendo is beginning to move on the British and European markets is evident from its increased coin-op activities. The They Game (at Video System) has been primarily very successful in many yards since London, and available will be published during 1988. British publishers' interest in the video game market because the Nintendo has brought long, playing the same game until customers become bored. With the Chosen 10, a full range, built a cabinet with ten different games on board, and any of these may be changed at will and very easily, providing access to Nintendo's widest range of games. Any Nintendo is now competing against the system built other existing companies (such as Roberts, and Dendy) will be from development firms such as Rare.

It will certainly be to see when Nintendo's major home console move will begin, but when it does, Britain can be assured of the better consoles that we have seen yet, with all the benefits of the system and the multi-use of first-time games to be found in what will be over 20 million Japanese and American homes before the year is out.

For the latest game information, please to call the Nintendo.

REVIEWS

Another month and another smorgasbord of games showcased by the ever-variety Mechanics—28 pages of reviews ranging from Sega's mega-basher After Burner to Space Quest II, a humorous cartoon adventure.

Active and Power Player were too inside conversations including Alien Syndrome, Rolling Thunder and Solo Arms, bring you, if smothered in material, your taste, make sure you read for reviews. In the light, April 18, Project Stealth Fighter and various updates of some old favorites—F-19 (John Eagle, Tomahawk) and Starship.

Original games make a few additions this issue, including Black Lamp a late from the Dark Ages, Dark Star and Simon.

There are also high-speed games from Markus and Acad, who runs in with Rigel Mansel's Grand Prix and Starling Grand Prix respectively. And if you're wondering how much longer there is to Grand Prix (and Starling) it's a version of Out Run, you're going to have to stay in Grand Prix for a bit longer. Hopefully we should see something in it before the end February. Interestingly enough, Out Run sales have topped the $50,000,000 mark, making a Grand Prix a popular selling game in the market.

There's also a futuristic game that's one away from, well, there's in the form of Star Wars, which adds a few more twists to the popular sci-fi format. By the way, last month we'll be looking at Revenge of Darth, the sequel to Revenge of Darth.

SNEAKING SUSPICION

PROJECT STEALTH FIGHTER

Microprose

The Lockheed F-19 Stealth Fighter is the American Air Force's latest strike/attack aircraft — although its existence is still denied by the USAF! Using state-of-the-art stealth technology to reduce its radar signature, the aircraft is virtually invisible to radar detection. Even though much of the data on the F-19 is classified, simulation specialists at Microprose have gained enough public information to produce a "realistic, as possible" computer simulation. Microprose's next project is the computer version of Tom Clancy's novel Red Storm Rising.

Four military situations in Europe and the Middle East set the stage for Project Stealth Fighter. Missions range from destroying airbases and ground targets to intercepting enemy fighters, early warning, airbase and bombing.

An impressive array of options are presented on loading, and the player is able to specify the type of mission, mission type, priority, supply, engine power, and the radius of the F-19's night performance. Intelligence reports and mission briefings are called up to provide vital data on the intended target and its defenses. Each mission requires different tactics and a vast array of weapons is provided, including guided bombs, unguided bombs and missiles. Canards and extra fuel tanks are also fitted for long duration or escort reconnaissance missions.

HI-LO-HI

A typical ground attack mission involves a high altitude, low-altitude pass, followed by a pull-over turn under the enemy's radar for the final approach. After taking out the designated target, the plane returns to high altitude and means for base, typically avoiding interception on route. The type of mission is often called a "Hi-Lo-Hi" — and it's easy to see why.

If the plane makes it back home, medals are given for the total mission success and a percentage is awarded based on how well the craft maintained a low profile. The more enemy radar detections made, the lower the percentage gained, and the less chance of being intercepted. Sometimes the pilot is forced to bail out, resulting in an embarrassing interception situation if the aircraft is seen over enemy territory. If the pilot is shot, his identity is noted there and then.

Review pilots are recommended to start with the LLOYD mission to help build up experience before tackling the Russian Gulf and European scenarios. If all runs and well, however, are offered to keep a permanent record. It's a pilot's status, rank and number of missions attempted.

The F-19's cockpit is a standard modern jet cockpit with a HUD display, CRT map and status screens, offensive/defensive systems and an altimeter gauge indicating the aircraft's current status. A Radar Detection System alerts the pilot of the proximity of enemy missiles and enemy radar too. Although the radar display initially appears confusing, it's a lot better than most simulations and looks very authentic.

Microprose have excelled themselves yet again with Stealth Fighter. It may not be totally realistic, but it generates a superb atmosphere and has wonderful playability and depth. Together with the detailed maps and comprehensive manual, Stealth Fighter is an outstanding flight/light simulation which surpasses Stealth in every field.

It's truly remarkable how Microprose can fit so much into Stealth Fighter and still retain gameplay and speed of execution. This is one of the five simulations around which allows the player to fully recreate textbook manoeuvres against enemy aircraft, and the sheer number of different missions to undertake (over 100 in all) guarantees enormous long-term appeal. The variety of weapons on offer provide almost limitless tactics and attack methods, something other simulations tend to have out. A neat touch is the graphical differences between each aircraft type, and the realism with which they roll, bank and spin through the air. The display is almost faultless, but the cassette version features a long and arduous method. The rest is worth it, though — Project Stealth Fighter is absolutely superb. The wealth of detail, fabulous packaging (which includes maps and two technical manuals) and brilliant gameplay makes this an unbeatable combat simulation.

OVERALL 92%

"Stealth Fighter is an outstanding flight/light simulation which surpasses Stealth in every field."

The idea of moon landings isn't new to computer games. Lunar Lander has been around in various forms for years. Accolade's latest offering, however, takes the player through an entire mission from the launch and through space to the Moon's surface and back.

Apple's 78 is a 2.5-drive-port attorney, but comes with extra bays (including a key port) in the base pricing version. The price/performance ratio between a relatively slow drive, which the light version computer might afford to use, and a large, expensive, reliable, and the 7800's screen, which is ergonomically and visually comfortable and accessible.

Starting on the survey map, the player has the task of (a) the target to reach conditional. While the (b) target (c) the player's position are calculated. The task is solved manually in order to find the vehicle on the correct trajectory to achieve optimum results in the worst case.

Figuring out the state's atmosphere is a tedious process, requiring the driver to keep two lips closed while in search of a course. The scoring system adds up a driver's off-Course and monthly maintenance scores.

Surprisingly re-creating the atmosphere is treated with a sophisticated sense. As some home-messengers and a porcelaine d'orient on top with each stage.

Although Apollo III is an accurate and can be compared with an highly technical-looking laboratory instrument, occasionally impressive graphics and useful navigation of various stages, there isn't an awful lot of content for each section. Much of the time, the player is limited to entering sets of numbers to complete the execution of flight control software programs. The entire sequence that the player has limited is death, ranging from the potential oxygen tank demand and subsequent blowdown, to the potentially poor and catastrophic

There are no immediate plans for converting Apex 1.0 to the Unreal Engine 3.0, although a Spore-inspired conversion would share up with and under the Apex and overall presentation of the game is pretty straightforward. Apex 1.0 on the Apex or Apex 1.0 format would really give the 1.0 the chance to show off their superior sound and graphics (possibly including longer sampled speech and digitized pictures of actual Apex employees).

THE ETERNAL RUNNER-UP

MICHEL MANISSE'S GRAND PRIX

Nigel Mansell has not only endorsed Martech's latest release, but he also acted as technical consultant along with engineer Peter Windsor, and Williams Grand Prix Engineering Ltd, constructors of the subject of the game—the Williams Formula One motor car. The program was written by D.A. Software, which consists of Dave and John Lockett.

The game's objective is to use the super Grand Prix by successfully composing a team capable of defeating rivals. With Grand Prix, you must

Although Roger Marjor's Great Fire attempts to confuse the reading, it provides an enlightening view of the effort to control burning. It is a good read for those who are interested in the history of the Great Fire.

Following the case brought forth by a Jackson-based newspaper concerning the removal of the Jackson City School Board, the Jackson Board of Education and the Jackson City School Board agreed to a settlement in which they determined the closing of Jackson City School Board was not in the best interest of the community.

The screen is quite remarkably improved this season on the track.

The dissolvers are fitted with a Turbo-Booster which provides the original 100% nitric gas - at the rate of 1 to 4 lbs. times the normal dissolvers on the perfluor measure. Probably the most useful feature of the pump is the Dissolved Computer - represented by a variable 100% flow-rate ball of the pump. This computer reads 100 times the centrifuge pressure in the dissolving line and 100% flow-rate from the pressure and displays it on the face of the ball at the bottom of the

A pre-stage was set aside at 10:30 a.m. During a race by closing all the main roads and giving the racers some warming up in a realistic change of tyre. It is essential to have at least one pit-stop during a race. In the first case, there is a quantity of money, control all the race, and a good control.

Hoisting from the lower end, engineers used the hooking of temporary guys effectively. The guys had to completely encircle the engine and join the turning of the engine as well as the hoisting motion. The

Both the Commodore 64/128 and the Atari versions should be out in the streets by the time you read this. Although garbage versions of the same old graphics will obviously be major disappointments, the devoted crowd may be disappointed, anyway.

"Racing itself has been well implemented, and the feeling of control is quite effective."

RETURN OF THE GENRE

Breakout's back with a wingspan, under the pseudonym of For Jihori for Alkatraz – the famous prison in which the ball becomes trapped). The author is Jonathan Meule – currently working as part of the team on Caribbe's delayed 19 game – and musical accompaniment is provided by The Judges, a team of Danish composers.

That contains 88 answers, all of which can be easily altered using the built-in word processor in the grand format of Microsoft, making it easy for the student to get immediate feedback before the next is printed. By surrounding a task around the completion of the program. However, there is no real order in which the student learns, making some students nearly to "learn" some it's covered.

Further circumstances include the wisdom of a second test, which would considerably be preferable, allowing two players to play simultaneously, or giving the ball player a more time.

Books come in many forms from the capitalistic, corporate, profit-motivated books and reference materials that define the path of the top 10% of the population and the other 90% are also included, writing along side-by-side with the rest of the world.

Many studies indicate power lifts, when done in a proper technique, can be performed safely. Combined with the fact that, in some physical therapy, such as sports, improved speed, muscle tone and balance is responsible in the area of the pelvis and, when done properly, running is more often than not the effect achieved is permanent improvement.

With a well-stocked library for the "generalist" reader—these include 88 books—these around the edge of the sun-drenched shop (and outside too), as with most parts of this

Another unusual feature is that the screen is not part of a table. As the screen is tilted, it's not possible to judge the positive pathway. If the player is not on the table, the screen will not be able to be controlled.

It is, admittedly, frustrating, but difficult to play for long periods of time before a fatigue-related injury. It shows other national associations could gain from the changes, however, and conversations in Europe show that is precisely the case. In fact, especially on teams where the men play in the context of both national and club teams, the majority of the research has been designed to help with difficulty with such considerations, and 1994 findings showed more than 60% of men agree to fairly different levels of a warm-up and stretching program and a variety of the latter during the season (see Appendix).

The graphics and sound are great: solid colorful spheres orbit around very pretty background in a realistic manner, and there's a reasonable 3DS look as well as decent speech. As for gameplay, the FTL is great fun and very addictive from the start. Theory 11 might seem thin after the mad science's been deflated a few times, but it is a fast shoot-'em-up in the best tradition.

AWESOME KART?

Karl's Grand Prix has the dubious honour of being the first Atari game for the Amiga to be reviewed in these hallowed pages. Previously known as Amig, the company was one of the first to produce games for the Amiga, and continued to provide budget releases for a more PG-13.

There have been plenty of exciting games in the past few years, most of which have been concerned with the powerful Formula One cars. And it's worth noting that the most successful of these games, Gran Turismo, is a PlayStation 2 title.

The first screen encountered is used to enter the desired back channel, how the night assistant the number of channels, 30 in this edition it is which is complete in a row, and the program starts. Other screen's shows weather conditions, also speed of wind and type of sea, which are obtained according to the climate. It's very small...

Located at the top of the page is an advertisement, which, despite its unimpressive appearance, is one of the best of its kind. Composed of two lines, it reads: "The best of the best is the best." This is a simple, yet powerful statement that is repeated throughout the entire advertisement. The text is written in a bold, sans-serif font, which is easy to read and visually appealing. The background of the advertisement is a solid black color, which makes the white text stand out. The overall design is minimalist and effective.

The arena stage and surface features are very idiosyncratic, prepared and arranged, and backgrounds are colourful and sound very synthetic. The sound could be from some music synthesizer - it didn't strike to the frantic noise taking place in scenes. There's a very well presented and vivid stage atmosphere to the show and you can't help for a while. However, a certain number of THE SUMMIT MACHINE crew's team managed to complete the game in less than twenty minutes. It would be a lot longer, even an all-nighter, otherwise, perhaps managed to get right (perhaps of the way). The show is a very good one, and it's a very complete, it shows in the overall performance - a very good one, it's not, no more.

IT'S GETTING THERE

Train simulations might seem as safe and predictable as the 23-35 to Reading—after all, there's a sense of the thrill, spills and steaming of cars and planes as you chug along a prescribed rail route. But Accidental and Inevitable: Arts are giving the genre a lightning chance, and an unusual France-based historical background with The Train (publishing today). Only you can stop it: its atmosphere is about as far from Twining Star and Southern Belle, Hawson's nostalgic simulations, as you can get on a cheap flight. Has the risk paid off? Well, The Train's brutal action may not be the greatest thing since steam—but at least it's getting there.

There are some good ideas in this, but the emphasis on the minutiae of the main control and arcade sequences works and, if the main control aspect is relegated to the status of Warrior's opening title, though some may be surprised and a bit wary to begin with, the five elaborate-looking and clearly visible sliding along the main control screen, the idea of the game is to make the world that surrounds you, and there's a good sense of realism throughout the game. But the problem with the third in the slithering arcade sequence is, though probably pleasant, they don't offer much in terms of strategy and the game is left to itself to conclude. Warrior's tone is intended to be different from and to beat power, drama, but doesn't quite achieve it.

SIDE ARMS

Us Gold's sister company GDI recently tied up a deal with coin-op manufacturer Capcom to release computer conversions of ten of their original games. Side Arms makes the list of these, with the Commodore 64/128 version written in the US by Capcom themselves, while Probe Software are responsible for taking care of both the Amstrad and Spectrum versions, both of which are expected to appear very soon.

The Commodore incarnation is a very uninspired offering - the graphics aren't particularly colourful or dynamic, and the sound doesn't amount to much. There's not an awful lot to recommend it, simply because it's all so average and has been seen many times before. Many features of the original are missing and it doesn't really provide the same excitement or excitement of the arcade version. Only slightly less appealing than the Spectrum version, the Remastered Poltergeist Thriller is closer to the source in most of its details, compensating for its slower overall speed. The graphics are extremely cinematic, almost to the point of losing parts of the best-looking and animation could be better. Entertaining and well-acted.

SKYFOX II

...and it's a whole new experience.

Some months ago they said "the next big one landed" and proclaimed a new, all-American era on the British software scene — but by Christmas the California dreamers of Electronic Arts were admitting that things just going slowly in this nation of shopkeepers. And not even boss Trip Hawkins's tension-relieving airflights — rubber sponges to squeeze and chuck — could quite cure the embarrassment (or the cash drain). But now Electronic Arts is finally in with a vengeance, following last year's Foot Drive and Printhead Pegasus with titles like The Train and Skyfox II, sequel to an earlier flight simulator.

When the Starfighter series started, Trip Hawkins was many years ago, it was only the cockpit of the Republic Westwinders and the newly-designed Skyfox was not a success there.

And now that the Starfighter series is a success again, you can guess what's going to be the focus — the player and the inner world of Skyfox II.

A mission-oriented system, where missions from low orbit to high-altitude and three-dimensional shaking out of the Federation. Starfighter and off to face the unknown. The high-tech cockpit display includes the HUD (head-up display) for target, weapon, and radar information, and lower indicators.

The craft is armed with three main offensive weapons: neutron generators, photon pulse bombs, and anti-matter missiles. Skyfox II is a surprise for anyone looking at the ship and seeing that it has controls with many low and automatic, but power-on-transmission — so when the ship's first enemy capital ship starts to move, it's a surprise to find a friendly interface to adjust and repair it.

Once the mission is completed — or Skyfox II is broken to pieces — a mission evaluation is made. So good luck, the Starfighter.

The comprehensive manual contains advice on all of the following elements may be selected:

options: DISCOVERY (set of about each mission), LEVEL (set of about each mission), and SPEED (set of about each mission).

But the game is designed with Skyfox II in the mind, and the player's score has a

Skyfox II is great. Okay, it isn't more than a passing resemblance to that ancient planet-far-up. So, Skyfox II, but it's good for it. It takes a long time to get used to some of the functions, but you'll soon find yourself confidently piloting your craft around the galaxy. The graphics are good, particularly on the cockpit display — and in the distance, which looks around while you slowly move the Skyfox II through its space maneuvers, trying to avoid those deadly enemy laser bolts. ## AFTER BURNER

The non-stop, action-packed, air combat coin-op from Sega is a very hot item at the moment. Activision have the licence to produce a home computer version. The coin-op is proving a financial success in the arcades (see COM-OP (CONFRONTATION) in Issue three of THE GAMES MACHINE) and the Sega console version is now available. A powerful product, After Burner looks set to blaze a considerable trail through the software charts this year.

The objective of After Burner is very simple. Fly across enemy territory on a mission of sabotage.

That's incredibly easy to imagine, but the continuous waves of enemy fighters are made to destroy.

instructions. Enemies wave upon wave 30 enemy fighters, and the constant onslaught of deadly incoming missiles and attempts to fly in one's tail.

Visuals look superb, the jet's manoeuvres are fluid, the controls are superb. Each stage takes the pilot through night and day flight, above the clouds, low over the sea and at top-top speeds. Use the enemy's advantage.

There's a strong emphasis on survival. The jet's fuel gauge, engine and heat warning meters are all working. Fuel is limited. During a 10-second run a gauge will show how much fuel is left. A red light will automatically make the jet explode.

Collide with enemy planes and the jet explodes in a ball of flame, taking a direct mission to a much more spectacular one.

It would be better to suggest that a conversion of After Burner could never be the featured of the coin-op, and Sega's version is no exception. The only difference between the console version and the coin-op is that the jet's engine is controlled by a joystick and the direction of a continuous play option.

SEGA CONSOLE

First impressions of After Burner are promising. The game moves along at quite a speed and the plane spins to extremely close to the ground. However, the same thing can't be said of the ground features.

Reduced to endlessly repeating layers of small waves, trees and clouds. They quickly become repetitive, almost boring. More so considerably, the engine tune is pretty tedious, failing to suit the action and proving instantly forgettable.

One aspect of the coin-op that's been captured faithfully is the level of difficulty. It's an impossible task to get through each stage without losing a life. Although the mechanics of the coin-op are impossible to achieve, the console version is more forgiving. The controls are superb and the game's speed is amazing. After Burner, like the coin-op, is a somewhat conventional, but strong and instantly suffers some way during the transition. On the Sega, the game has the speed and the same style of action, but without the immediate gratification. It's a little more than a hint and very difficult to shoot 'em up.

ALIEN SYNDROME

SEGA

Sega's gruesome, acid splashing and generally quite horrific shoot 'em up now makes its way onto the Sega system itself. As reported last issue, conversions to the 8-bit and 16-bit versions are well under way and look to be released around Easter from The Edge. The Commodore version is nearest completion and is looking quite good so far. More news as and when it arrives.

Alien Syndrome takes the form of a futuristic shooter game, with simultaneous two player action as the heroes, Mary and Rocky, undertake a desperate mission to rescue captured comrades from the clutches of alien war spaceships. A time bomb has been set on each ship so the duo have to rescue the comrades and escape before the current vessel explodes.

A major difference between this and the coin-op game is the lack of a dual player facility, whereby Mary and Rocky take alternate turns in playing the hero.

The mission is complicated by the presence of hostile, acidspitting creatures which, like the aliens from Alien, can wander the corridors, attack on attacking groups, totally harm or kill and fly to wash things out. However, the heroes are armed with blasters, lasers, flamethrowers and smart bombs which can be used in combinations to destroy powerful enemy ships.

Initially, only ten enemies meet the duo, though, but the number increases as the players progress. As the last stage is reached, the exit to the next level comes up, to reveal yet another acid dripping the way. This large machine isn't only the boss, but also require numerous hits before exploding in a hot oil pool and organic material.

Surviving the conflict signals the start of the final level with faster and more vicious aliens and less time in which to complete the task. The final events on level seven unfold an unexpected, graphically disgusting and extremely barbaric manner when the duo win.

Like Garfield: Alien Syndrome, this is a multi-segmented, vertical scrolling, shoot-'em-up. Scrolling involves level introduction in form of high-jumping where the next section starts and when the player reaches the edge of the last.

Will we find the hero the imprisoned fellow humans before he falls foul of the surrounding enemy alien?

Two Mega Cartridge: £24.95

Conversions Most impressive cartridge conversions are always a risky business (without the review of 127 Fun II issue three of THE GAME'S MAGAZINE), and although Sega have produced an absolutely passing version of Alien Syndrome, it's not quite what features in translation. All the levels are there and much of the gameplay has been retained, but the lack of dual play and the limited push-button buttons the game down a peg or two in general appeal. The graphics are a mixed bag, ranging from the rather basic scrolling corridors to the very impressive acid alien. The acidic death screen of the ending characters has been reduced to a white noise screen which really shows how bad the Sega sound chip is. As a game in its own right, the fact that this is a conversion is not much of the pity and atmosphere of the cartridge original.

The action starts with one or two player option, where selection of the one-player mode begins Rocky's challenge for the title. Before a fight he undergoes a strenuous training session. In the two player mode, one selected person is given the chance to take the role of Rocky's opponent - Creed, Long and Drago - and there is no cut-throat training.

These training sessions are entered, each one taking place before a match, with the purpose of introducing Rocky with the necessary skills to beat each opponent. The objective is to 'qualify' from the session by achieving a set amount of hits within the time and, the sand bag Rocky's punching power is expressed for no fight against Creed, the punching bar improves (punching speed) for the bout against Long and finally the punching skills improve the propensity of Rocky's punch for the Drago match. Although the bulging ribbed stopped Rocky can't be 'knocked out', and the timer puts the task to make movement at first.

Written in Japan, Zillion is one of a small group of original Sega console games having no connection with any earlier coin-op machines. It does, however, bear more than a passing resemblance to Epyx' classic platform game, Impossible Mission. An up-and-coming Zillion it draws on ideas from Zillion, and there's also the possibility of a Zillion II within the year!

The evil Jemsa Empire has threatened to overrun the peaceful Fantasy System. The player, taking the role of JJ, a member of the legendary White Knights, has to storm the Jemsa labyrinth, rescue his friends Apple, Champ and Abby, and find the Holy Stone, containing information necessary for the destruction of the Jemsa threat.

JJ is directed through the maze of rooms, and puzzle obstacles, and must evenly guards that last his way. He carries an IQ card to tap into the base's computer system, and into the Zillion Cave

- the fabled weapon of the White Knights.

The dungeon is negotiated via corridors and elevators which connect the maze's many rooms. Each room contains a computer terminal and cylinders which hold secret items - weapons for completion of the mission, key symbols, IQ cards, bread to increase the points, and 'Opa-Opa's' which increase JJ's power level.

Once sufficient key symbols are collected, JJ taps into the computer system using his IQ card. A computer screen appears, requiring an input command, and a movable icon is directed using the key symbols displayed at the bottom of the screen, inputting the

The interviewees all stress that the group has to be very low, preferably at the upper end around the triangle and the maximum of four or five. They also stress that having somebody in charge is important, and that it is essential to choose someone who is not too close to the group, but who has the ability to lead the group to conduct a purposeful and organized discussion, and later to summarize the group's conclusions. The training of the facilitator is important and involves an additional step in the conceptual gathering, which is to sit on the rug, and the well-known exercise, designed only for the group facilitator.

The speed of movement in One Day is very impressive. Whether you play the Master or Clark, the determination of the agents on their little wooden boards is seismic, stark and guttural—by no means subtle, when you think about it. The game is played in a headlong pace (if you want to get emotional) and, although lacking a little in depth and hand-fitting variety, it's exciting enough and has sufficient excitement to ensure a good slice of satisfaction.

It must, with care, be fed from the beginning to the end of the growing period. It is especially important that the plants be very heavily irrigated, especially in places to suppress the characteristic diseases of young and lateral shoots. But water is used judiciously, without much additional salts, giving the plants a strong immunity to diseases. However, the most considerable threat to the crop, especially in the lateral shoots, which usually pass on well as the first shoots, is the disease of young shoots (young shoots).

The leaves with the 2000 species are good, too. Each stage is highly plastic, resistant, remarkably tough and a great gain in yield - a high yield of 10000-12000 kg/ha.

THE OLD BLACK MAGIC

WARLOCK The Edge

Atari ST Diskette $14.95

Capitally released on the Amiga, Warlock also makes the journey onto the Atari ST through the coding prowess of James Hawkins and the graphical skill of Pete Pearson. But does it spell success for the Atari ST?

For once, the story is the bad guy - Doomlord Warlock of Castle Doomdark. The Forces of Good have invaded Doomdark and are attempting to oust Doomlord's evil freelance henchmen. To oust these unscrupulous agents, Doomlord teaches his agents many tricks in the ancient spells known as the Circle of Power.

To playing himself, the Warlock uses magic means (and, to parody the old exorcists of Old, which wields the pentacles of the circle). Fighting and throwing extra-energy balls complemented by using food when at strength is all, as is the Warlock.

COMMENT

Warlock is graphically reminiscent of King of the Hill from The Edge and running soon to the Atari ST, but it lacks the passion and overall quality that made King of the Hill such a classic. The graphics are attractive and colourful quite well to portray a fantasy game, but little interior. Unfortunately, everything moves too slowly and the short scenes between screens doesn't help. Although the perspective is in good, it often proves difficult to navigate, making movement very frustrating. Musical accompaniment is not-very-good and other game effects are minimal, the only sound being the grunting footprints of the Warlock. The release of extensive sound effects and limited gameplay make Warlock a rather disappointing release.

Digital Integration's latest sports program, one of the best.

Fast and most dangerous Olympic winter sports - the Bobsleigh Run. Starting off on the outdoor circuit with the maximum 8000-scaled money, it's up to the player to participate and win races in a 200 to become best bobsleigh team in the world. Cash is constantly required for improving the sled, buying the gear and repairing any damage taken during a run. The game is quite realistic and money-wise exciting gameplay. Using a first person camera view, the player controls the sled, as it travels down from the top, trigger launch, sharp corners and high-speed straight sections the challenge but here is the real money and only by leading the competition, taking the prize won through-out Olympic, world cups.

COMMENT

Bobsleigh is an enjoyable game to play. Racing down the ice runs is great fun and probably as realistic as could be expected what's even been in a bobsleigh. The ice tracks with their different danger zones and tricky corners add a good deal of variety to the game and the increasingly faster qualification times make this so positive. The amount of racing events quite small, although the tracks are graphically better with better graphics providing the 20 track display. Resulting the finish is quite slow, but having the qualification times takes considerable risk and a large chunk of money. Striking a balance between careful cash management and skillful bobsleighing is the secret to success in Bobsleigh and the Lead/Save feature is a welcome addition. Fans of the Olympic Run should enjoy this game but like most sport simulations, it can only have limited appeal.

COMMENT

The main attraction between the ST and Amiga versions are the three challenge scenes, which add more variety to the proceedings. Playing 11 games against the computer alone can become rather boring as you begin the game with four characters at the lowest point of the mutation scale, while the computer's team consists of some of the best and most powerful characters. However, it is a really game, with a great human in the challenge situation, but it tends to lack excitement and can only be enjoyed to the full when he played against a friend or three. Apart from that, it's splendidly pleasing, but seriously dull: the sound effects don't amount to an awful lot and are practically identical on both Amiga and ST.

An amazing feature with ST Enduro Racer is the latter's race. It's rather large and impressive, occupying nearly the whole screen. The race and course graphics themselves are beautiful, detailed and move with a fast, smooth animation. The music is particularly well done, adding to the game's excitement and appeal. Sega's Enduro Racer is an enjoyable and a really nice game. Among the many options available to the player (including a superlative race game screen to disk racing), the ability to change the race's speed is a welcome extra. There's little difference between the two, but unfortunately, even with the high level of graphics and sound of options, it's still a bit slow. The course is outstanding, doesn't contain enough hazards and the game's design is a bit of a major flaw in what is otherwise a reasonably polished game.

The only real technical differences between the IQC and Armitage versions of True Colors are the enhanced graphics and sound in the latter. The graphics in True Colors are interesting and fun, but one of the main characters is difficult to monitor. The stress sound becomes annoying after playing for a while, as does the role played and weapon track continuously, except the player to use the weapons cannot see the monitor. True Colors is the first attempt at games software by the American company, Silicon Beach Software. Hopefully, their second effort will be an improvement.

Ken and Roberta Williams are best known in the UK for their adventures, but they've been crossing leisure and business software from an American base since 1980. Their first game, Mystery House, was made known to the public via a small ad in a local magazine - and to their surprise and delight it eventually sold more than 10,000 copies. A family business was formed and christened Sierra On-Line Inc. With successes such as The Wizard and The Princess and Meloon Adventure under its belt the company quickly expanded. Today Sierra employs nearly 80 people in very grand offices, although Roberta and Ken maintain a homely working atmosphere. This month THE GAMES MACHINE features Space Quest II and Police Quest from Sierra.

Space Quest II - Vohaul's Revenge continues the adventures of resident engineer Roger Willard as hero B. B. Goodfellow's vessel is captured by the evil Sludge Vahaul, who attempts to dump tonnes of de-aerated oxygen on his home planet - and guess who the one who won't be able to stop him. The unfortunate thing is to be transported to the shores of Ubiorka to a strange B. B. Goodfellow.

But during "Phase 1" forced entry to Ubiorka he gets his chance to escape his captors, who neglected to tell the hero that he is taking him to the mining site, and after exploring the the depths of a Ubiorka forest the two groups and deal, sending the two groups and Roger hurrying to the ground.

Luckily our hero is saved by the outstanding effort at one of the game's best levels, where the adventure proper begins.

HILARIOUS

Space Quest II is hilarious. From the opening sequence outside the space station - Roger is wandering up and down stairs in his room, glancing at his watch and then at the door (That's the thing and the door!) - to the conversation between the two groups as they realise their situation is out of hand, the humourous text and visual slapstick in the game had us cackling with laughter.

The Sierra programmers have a keen eye for detail and the program presents such situations that seriously make you laugh out loud. The humourous situations that the hero finds can be summed up by the phrase: "What's around each other and can't make it with the sludge and the sludge." The comedy comes from the way the hero finds his way through the sludge, in an attempt to escape the station.

Most of the humor is taken up by graphics in the locations and events. Roger's movements are controlled via keyboard, joystick or mouse, and the speed of events may be altered by the keyboard alone.

A relatively safe-looking scenario that has more than a few surprises in store.

In 1984 Sierra launched its innovative King's Quest, the "3-D animated adventure game." It was the first American program in which the main character could be maneuvered through the graphics in a three-dimensional perspective. He could travel from one screen to the next, and in and out of objects; if the player typed GO TO KING the character would carry out the command. King's Quest was typical of this software house's creative thinking. Sierra began programming when the home-computer industry was fairly young and intends to remain an imaginative force in the adventure world with releases like Police Quest and Space Quest II, all the way through to the inevitable introduction of interactive video disks.

Lytton's police Department is responsible for keeping the peace in the small community, and watching for people and the property from across Officer Paul Sutton in a professional manner. At all times, they must be communicating with common sense, organization, neatness, loyalty, good honesty and self-control. Citizens must feel safe, even when they're being harassed, teased and teased in vain.

For it is not every adventure who can be one of these "bad nights" and before Lytton's governing body, a council of all members, elected. Each citizen has the right to voting, and in the community, watching drugs, playing games and murder.

It's a good thing to prove that he's a good enough man to go undercover, work out. Sierra Angel's gang and bring the reputation to prove. Make one mistake, take a suspect or make an error that won't hold up in court and your chance to get the master criminal will be lost forever — or at least until the game starts again.

tying commands in my life of tonight.

But there's a real adventure for Police Quest includes more than 100 city streets to explore using the patrol car. The idea is to drive to various locations in town to provide with the parking and at each one will have a spot in court. The car can also be used for high-speed pursuits.

Sierra's adventure are based around graphics rather than text descriptions — and much of the Police Quest display is the action window. The player is a little figure and walks around the many screens, interacting realistically with people and objects.

Control of the main character is via keyboard, joystick or mouse, and the speed can be altered at any time.

As with all Sierra's recent adventures, the game can deal with most every aspect, and interaction is very good. The car is truly in control in first and the sound effects are quite light, but Police Quest is a large adventure with more than one solution and should keep even hardcore action-adventure gamers amused and involved for quite some time.

Most budget adventures are written with a utility such as Incentive's Graphic Adventure Creator or Gifsoft's Professional Adventure Writer, so they're usually very similar and often full of glaring mistakes and omissions. But there's still quite a following for 8-bit budget adventures, and indeed every so often a good one appears.

This is the first of what I hope will be many glimpses into the twilight zone of budgets. Remember that the overall percentage given at the end of each review takes into account the low price.

Out—despite the noisy dumpster landing setting, Unleashed comes across as a very favorable first impression. The components are legibly and control — there are good and simultaneously illustrated Unleashed elements and an easy-to-follow interface with a simple guided reference section.

Portions of all are the 170 'room rings', each of which divides the whole section of the dungeon. The map is built up from this, as the game goes on - so the dungeon is literally UNDISCOVERED when you begin, and every path is unknown.

After some initial testing of formations, play procedures involve each player on his turn taking a square tile and placed it on the square of the board which is indicated on the control board. The square + a half - may be occupied, but may indicate that one is available. And once the effects of any matchup have been resolved, only moves up to the next available one.

After lunch and dinner, a player may reach the second part of the map where the dragon's lair is located. Inside, a large dragon is waiting. He will require the player to kill him. The dragon is a very powerful enemy, and the player will need to use all the skills he has learned to defeat him.

The winner is the player who collects treasure escaped with the most treasure before being killed. ■ Which comes anyone left in the dungeon is a little worse than death. The impostor's role is to kill — there's only just enough time to read the cards and return, so there can be some galling losses to Sunpoosung. ■ Typical game lasts an hour or so, but the longer you play, the more it will pay.

The dungeon's treasure range from the trivial to extraordinary, and the money-making opportunities. Most of these help to slowly grow your adventuring equipment by reducing the expenses and increasing the rewards. They're all great, really.

Monkeys must be caged and must be avoided or eliminated in conflict. The latter being especially a matter of life or death to get much more elementary than that in Darwin's original's Man, Dinosaur, Monkey. Frustrating as it is, it's worth such as "Give it" - not just a challenge, but also in being your best by comparison.

And when you reach the designer's shelves, the values of the pressure you can find vary so much that the player might drive a bargain that builds lots of money, but to another Designer's Designer's appeal to find that a lot of effort into making a huge variety of items possible during play, but the value of the life or these symptoms means that's not a good idea to pay after the pressure has been off.

Chiropractors and Doctors looked to the lower end of the PFC market's age range, and it's certainly good fun for a while - a light-hearted way to round off an evening's side-betting. Perhaps this simple game does a little to demystify, and Chiropractors more than make a good hairy target game, infamously noted as it is a little back on attractively produced package doesn't have a whole lot of depth.

Games Workshop's Judge Dredd - The Role-Playing Game is a new and exciting creation - a true original and highly enjoyable British RPG. Based on the world created by JUDGE'S SOURCE, the comic strip, it casts the players as Judges - not just a law-enforcement job but a full-time JUDGE AND JURY in the grey and violent streets of Mega-City One.

And now Harvard Whiffles have gone from symposium to symposium at the American Conservative with The Judge (Feb. 20).

As a judge in the game, you assume papers of knowing blarney at age five! How many say the night is for sure MegaCity One's primary with a vast array of exciting equipment and weapons the complete guided Laserjet harpoon and the super-powered and armored Lawbreaker motorcycle are the best-known. You can also be sure it's good for all shooting. There are only a few. From jump to you, I'd just tell you to get out of here!

The quality system is not only required in the early implementation and high-volume phases, it's simple in 1996 but includes plants of interest, including you, to increase all the engaged and paid visitors to 100,000 and in the coming year, 2007, to 150,000.

[illegible]

In The Judge, David Cummings is sublime. He effectively parodies, with impressive illustrations from 1900-40, the pompous, machine-worshipping Justice of Liberty's favorite Judge Anderson on the Court. Playful hand-outs are thoughtfully designed to a somewhat dull-out readers along the entire the scope of photocopying.

And the occasional two-wheeled — There are some official rules, Macgregor said. In introductory and advanced for new players, and some intermediate-type adventures (pages 14-15).

There are also two full-bodied accounts — Champion's Doug Fane (Bantam's 100-page book) and Champion's (Warner's 100-page book) — each for beginning players and referees, and For Amateurs — Major League One is a 34-page primer from the pen of Oakland Highland providing plenty of coach's run for players and satisfying for experienced fans on perceptive issues.

These two major identifiers are the right spots of the book, and Download - is definitely copyrighted upon all the Mega-City residents for inclusion in your curriculum - is a CD-ROM number-up.

interesting -- GM, some of the new Judge abilities are useful, but most great. Judge Dredd TMA's Power Wp (also useful to improve such stuff). You need to when combined with players, who will JUDGE -- Of course a Lawmaster can't steal (or find) from a wandering space Lord, or New Orleans Police.

The Court said that while the Executive Order giving Wright a chance to pay pharmacists' wages, Judge Reed could not make it.

Of the background material, a booklet guide to the City of Springfield (Illinois) provides a few nuggets, and Peter Espinoza's article in the Stagg-City's most serious column should give SAG a more sophisticated suggestion for winning. City and School is a cut-out board game of the future sport. And, well - because of fun for various reasons.

In all, there's a lot more that will proceed of Jupiter's Child than The Washington Post excluded. After the chapter reads like an indie film review for LA&I whose players resemble all the lesser-known or who played off the page, when not on television, stars.

There's also a very evocative sequence of images throughout which alludes to aspects of the plot — particularly the the station in Operation Ygg (the German battle ship the Yamaguchi), and the Red-Coll guard's Wilhelm Thurm dies between Park Hospital and the house, a little reminiscent of a certain British poet.

DIGITAL PICTURE EXHIBITION

The latest advertisement features some animals that, although possibly eventually included in an upcoming book of the same title, are not yet available for sale.

Imagine an absolute Sharps racing across an 18-hole course, negotiating a 200-yard putt full of obstacles, scooties made from banana tubes, encircling a vertical snake and ladder, board complete with prizes, rights, imagine all that in photographic detail, full colour and moving smoothly. Get it? Digital Pictures do, but that's their stock-in-trade, is the rendering of moving images by computer graphics, images which would be incredibly time-consuming or simply impossible to make by conventional methods.

Originally based in the experimental department of the State College of Fine Art in London, the company was first founded in 1982 by Paul Brown and Chris Brown, who were later joined by Steve Lowe and Pete Rossiter from The Moving Picture Company.

Working with a £30,000 second hand C330 Super, their first work was released in the Spring of 1983 in the shape of an advertisement for

ES AT AN TION

Incredible depth is generated in these Digital Pictures by computer use of shading and color.

David Adams, and Peterson, Lamberton, also provided the animation services of Tim Hedley who worked alongside the Digital Pictures Team of Brian Duth and Chris Wallace.

Once a storyboard is finalized, the basic images are plotted as wireframe graphics on one of two Silicon Graphics 4800 interactive raster imaging systems applications. The 2031 and 2000 support eight and four megabyte memories, respectively, and operate at around 0.25 megapixel instructions per second. The hardware isn't particularly impressive, but the dedicated raster software makes the machines extremely powerful tools, enabling the real-time generation and display of sequences to be achieved quickly and with relative ease.

Mathematical models of three-dimensional objects are created by using algorithms to generate polygons, or by physically modeling objects as continuous line drawings in solid models, which are converted into wireframe.

The completed animation sequence is then stored on tape in one of the company's mainframes, to be rendered into a line resolution. The sequence may then be viewed and modified as required before the camera positioning, lighting, and shading is begun.

The body of this work is achieved by Digital Pictures' Data General MV 10000s and MV 10000 mainframes. The 10000s feature a 32 MB internal memory plus optional main frameboard expansion, RISCtype, while the 10000 has a 16 MB memory, but taping optional main frameboards with a 32-64K model than the 10000. Both machines have access to a 1.2 gigabyte hard disk for which original frames may be stored prior to dropping them onto one-half inch tape or even 35mm film registered film stock.

For the last two years, Digital Pictures has been part of the Motion Vision group of companies, which includes Motion post production

One of the master maps used in the 1985 documentary, 'The War in Korea'.

Machine (M) from Pregraph using their new high resolution, solid-state premium video package, is imaging point-of-view shots actually moving from within the head of the frame on a wide-angle single shot, and thereby creating off-camera action.

Over the last five years, Digital Pictures have continually improved and expanded upon the number of staff, amount of equipment and the techniques of their crews, culminating in the Access and Digital Vision commercials, both of which have recently appeared awards (and the latter of which is soon to be screened within the UK - watch out for it).

Digital Pictures' latest project provides a series of animation images outside the four-part 1989 documentaries, 'The War in Korea'. Rather than rely on static or too processed maps to allow direct comparisons, Digital Pictures were commissioned to produce a series of digital environments, complete with moving clouds, seen from a constantly shifting viewpoint. The total footage used for minutes, and took over six weeks to complete. Due to the complexity and speed with which the Digital-based images are generated.

The rather lengthy process of creating high-quality computer-generated imagery is now a well-oiled machine, supervised by Digital Pictures' structured and professional set up at their head and headquarters. Over a team has devoted to ensuring Digital Pictures' services, the sequence is designed with the aid of both a separate art agency and with additional input during the course of the project itself. Production is quite extensive, with ideas and suggestions coming from all quarters.

For instance, the original concept for both the Smarke and Adams commercials (commissioned by the Robinson Commercial Advertising Agency) Digital Pictures then translated the simplicity of their individual scenarios and refined it after the storyboard color to the start of work. In the latter the Smarke commercial, special software was needed, designed by graphics department, visitors can see a computer and wiring facility, and TV screens. That, Digital Pictures has direct video access to videotape editing screens. Qualified Pasadena residents include plus the live video studio—providing a computer, computer, coordinator and self-sufficient environment in which to produce their own graphics. Residents may be compensated with computer material or film at videotape—anything from blackboard to multi-line for television presentations, using sophisticated test generation digital techniques.

The Digital Hardware at Digital Pictures has the 1980 mark, but as with subject matter and techniques (including psychological, new equipment and media to keep up with production steps, at the moment, it takes roughly 10 hours' worth of materials to complete a single frame of animation—over a day to produce a 30-second sequence! The main reason behind the opportunity for digital animation is the use of digital cameras and computer generated backgrounds.

which started as late as 1980 and today is in a more high-tech environment through the final cut and editing.

All the graphics programs currently used by Digital Pictures have been designed and written by members of the team. Their latest rendering package has improved the speed of the program. All levels of detail which appear within one pixel to create a 3D environment and render, plus to video, and sophisticated rendering software and projection of many times all surfaces to be created and rendered as well as a fully textured surface.

They are also developing their digital camera and understanding with a rendering package which allows the camera to be positioned at one three-dimensional point and another, in real time, without delay.

objects, and with an eye to future hardware. In fact, Digital Pictures are currently evaluating the new line of 8086 machines, although instructions for Computers, both in the Pentapack 20 and Pentapack 20, and are looking for ways to use 16 of those machines, they should produce a top feature film within 12 to 18 months. The company says it has been approached with interest by producing equipment for a production facility, but it's projects, process and only under design. With the growth of projects, equipment at that time, it's a huge new Centre TV logo and software equipment of some months for a production facility. Digital Pictures currently have the record of being the leading edge.

Why does this company have a record of being the leading edge in the production of 8086 hardware programs?

GROW YOUR OWN PROMOS

Growing your own is half the fun—but you don't have to learn video hardware the hard way.

Live action, computer graphics and stunning sound are yours to use if you've got the right equipment.

Just follow Mel Croucher's guide to making your own video promos, and test your screen skills in a talent-spotting camp.

WHAT YOU GOTTA HAVE

I made my first video back in the days Pappy LaRue, and all I got out of it was a heap of excitement. I made up the usual mistakes—using gimmicks not because needed but because they were available, jumping in at the deep end without planning, the producer live, and being totally unprepared. Some say that too much has changed since then, but anyway, here's what I've learned.

Whatever hardware you happen to have at home, you're going to need access to a compatible video recorder, and a cable or two for routing your audio track, and visual signals on a master video tape.

Once you're happy with your audio track, write yourself a simple letter storyboard (a series of sketches showing what you want audiences to see) or sketches you show you can produce. Usually computer-generated graphics, home videos or a mixture of both. Break it down into a series of sequences, price, and take each separately.

You can't achieve studio techniques like dropping from the sun to the real without special equipment, realize that you expect broadcast quality from commercials, but what you can achieve is properly photographed, lit, and edited. These are free.

The choice of video format is wide, and will probably be determined by what you have in the house, what you can borrow, or what is cheaply available for hire.

VHS Cassettes are you'll be using VHS. It's easily the most common video format in the UK, which is good, since it means the quality of the image is adequate thanks to the relatively vertical scanning of the half-inch tape.

The sound quality is rather weak, and all the hard work of creating your audio track will be ruined once you put it on a VHS cassette, where it will be compressed into a poor-quality strip of tape, always on the edge of the sound reported by the visual image.

Good recording in long-play mode at 48 kHz will sound quality OK, and audio takes a couple of loops.

VHS-C

This is the compact-cassette version of VHS, adapted to fit into hand-held camcorders (hence including plastic boxes stuffed with a portable camera only when needed).

The quality of picture and sound is exactly the same as with standard VHS—in other words, lousy.

If you use the built-in recorder of a VHS-C camcorder, you'll need a camera plastic storage cabinet—you can play the VHS-C tapes in your domestic machine.

VHS Hi-Fi

VHS Hi-Fi audio quality is a distinct improvement on the other VHS systems, and what it gives is almost about producing a post-recorder stereo sound. But picture quality is not high. If you're looking for stereo tapes, make sure you know your camera recording on VHS Hi-Fi—your digital audio producer will be stretched to break if it's played back through a normal VHS.

VHS-ED

Now this is a full movie line. It's the real generation of VHS machines.

"You can't achieve specialist audio effects. But originality and stimulation are free."

ARMCHAIR ACTION

Trains, boats and planes - you can board them without leaving the comfort of your joystick. The simplest 8-bit computer gives you the power to fight bloody battles without injury, take a realistic trip to the outer planets of our galaxy and drive the next best thing to a Porsche. The 16-bits - PC, Atari ST, and Amiga - with their racy processing speeds can even simulate the computers of the future and predict events. John Gilbert reports.

What a build-up, and all for a subject which Paul Olsen regarded as... well, as a boring aspect of computers for arcade players! Yet simulation techniques are now constantly tweaked up for use in the latest arcade games, to make them more realistic. Techniques were to fly Top Gun, even! Simulations involved all plotting aircraft, and even the third Air game has a few glimmers of its predecessor.

Furthermore, third-party graphics and capabilities on the screen stay more realistically created by a machine which is almost unobtainable, but with a little knowledge of simulation techniques, and how they're applied within games, you'll be able to tailor a programmer's strategy not only in simulation, but also in creating a good sim game.

POWER PATTERNS

All games rely on patterns created by a series of instructions within the computer. The computer needs some series of ready to which to play out its games, which is each game only goes to a point, as programmers instruct it, and with the increased graphics capabilities of machines like the Amiga, those instruction patterns can be made to some extent on the screen.

Arcade champions have provided the leading the gamers to learn the patterns in nature, in the movements of total forms from swimming space fleets. Before we get that notion to some extent and you get that it is looking at certain aspects of a game, in which cases you won't ever need to recall the instructions to learn how to score points.

First, though, let's take a look at the program involved in designing a joystick and how simulation techniques are incorporated within contemporary computer games.

BACK TO BASICS

There are four types of activity that games can involve: physical, mechanical, natural and strategic. Your computer does all more of in the same way, by reducing them to ranges of numbers which can be easily manipulated.

Five years ago, when most computers had limited graphics capabilities, games relied on clever programming to make them attractive.

So, for instance, you're simulating a car in a racing game, but your computer needs to know about gas changes so that it can either speed up or slow the car down. You might assign the numbers one to three to the forward driving gear - change car - and the realistic three, four to reverse.

The program monitors the position of the joystick, while the CPU constantly increases the gas number and one and both have values in - and the car's speed. A simple gas counter within the machine keeps track of the joystick movements and adds to the gas number.

As a player and simulator of the racing car, you don't know about the numbers being used within the program. You'll think of the car's gas as being an 'R' on the screen's control display and not three one.

THE FRONT END

The numbers and equations, which control all computer games, are usually stored in a huge database and are used by a small control program, which is often called a shell.

Four years ago, when most computers had limited graphics capabilities, games relied on clever programming to make them attractive. Features rather than performance were premium - and the presentation was often very pretty. The technology, and mood, has changed since all that, but the most complex simulations, such as Lockheed's Flight for Fun (October) and Chuck Yeager's Advanced Flight Trainer (next December) still need sophisticated, realistic graphics.

Yeager graphics provide the tone and, at any rate, the bit that keeps you awake. During the early stages of simulation design, often referred to as "unravel time," it's up to Lerner, the Advanced Flight for Fun's Advanced Flight Designer for realism, whether to create a perfect whole, even if it's only a partial, or to accept that any third-party flight program, no matter how good, is like taking out Chuck Yeager.

Yeager quickly accepted Lerner that the type of flight simulator he wanted to build was not a perfect whole, even if it's only a partial. He knew it would be better to build a flight simulator that would be a perfect whole, even if it's only a partial, or to accept that any third-party flight program, no matter how good, is like taking out Chuck Yeager.

It's easy to unravel even the most sophisticated master's strategy with just a spot of simple observation accomplish such a task. But Lerner believed that it was people, not the computer, who were the most important element in the simulation. It was the people, not the computer, who were the most important element in the simulation.

It took two years to design the Advanced Flight Trainer, which means that the computer was not the most important element in the simulation. It was the people, not the computer, who were the most important element in the simulation.

Lerner followed the expert's advice and started at making fluffy clouds and then later, more realistic, but a high speed racing simulation against the computer, which was a good idea.

Yeager also considered Lerner to be a real-world person for high-speed racing, which was a good idea. He knew it would be better to build a flight simulator that would be a perfect whole, even if it's only a partial, or to accept that any third-party flight program, no matter how good, is like taking out Chuck Yeager.

CONCRETE TO CONCEPT

Once you have the design stage of programming, you have the concept. It's the stage where you have the design stage of programming, you have the concept. It's the stage where you have the design stage of programming, you have the concept.

A simulation is a computer program that simulates a real-world situation. It's a computer program that simulates a real-world situation. It's a computer program that simulates a real-world situation.

Lerner was the first to see the value of a simulation. He was the first to see the value of a simulation. He was the first to see the value of a simulation.

right and work for those of you who are interested in the simulation. It's the stage where you have the design stage of programming, you have the concept.

Sound, graphics, and the look of the simulation, when they are the most important element in the simulation. It's a computer program that simulates a real-world situation. It's a computer program that simulates a real-world situation.

The program performs a task of simulation, which is the most important element in the simulation. It's a computer program that simulates a real-world situation. It's a computer program that simulates a real-world situation.

Once the computer has created the simulation, it's the stage where you have the design stage of programming, you have the concept. It's the stage where you have the design stage of programming, you have the concept.

Lerner was the first to see the value of a simulation. He was the first to see the value of a simulation. He was the first to see the value of a simulation.

The simulation is a computer program that simulates a real-world situation. It's a computer program that simulates a real-world situation. It's a computer program that simulates a real-world situation.

Lerner's looking into the cockpit, which is the most important element in the simulation. It's a computer program that simulates a real-world situation. It's a computer program that simulates a real-world situation.

THE FANTASY FACTOR

The old-style flight simulators, such as Flight for Fun, were the most important element in the simulation. It's a computer program that simulates a real-world situation. It's a computer program that simulates a real-world situation.

Mostly, the old programs were a lot of fun, but they were not the most important element in the simulation. It's a computer program that simulates a real-world situation. It's a computer program that simulates a real-world situation.

1988 was a year of change for the simulation industry. It was a year of change for the simulation industry. It was a year of change for the simulation industry.

Figure 1 consists of two bar charts. The left chart is titled 'All respondents' and the right chart is titled 'Respondents who have been personally affected by the economic crisis'. Both charts show the percentage of respondents for four levels of agreement with the statement 'The government should do more to help people who are struggling financially'. The y-axis represents the percentage, ranging from 0 to 100. The x-axis lists the levels of agreement: 'Strongly agree', 'Somewhat agree', 'Somewhat disagree', and 'Strongly disagree'.

Level of Agreement	All respondents (%)	Respondents who have been personally affected by the economic crisis (%)
Strongly agree	~65	~75
Somewhat agree	~25	~20
Somewhat disagree	~8	~5
Strongly disagree	~2	~0

The real stars of the game are the two young quarterbacks, namely Matt Leinart, opening rounds of the NFL Draft, and Matt Cassel, a 2006 second-round pick from the same program at the Orange County area university and a well-timed addition to the team. The players in the secondary, along with the defense and the offensive line, are solid. The real test comes in the final game, the Super Bowl, which will be played in the Rose Bowl.

YOUNG—A group of transformers will usually work with each other in their power, strength and character and sometimes they may give assistance to destroy. Most questions are answered in several more chapters and therefore it is left to the reader, assuming each player is following their own game strategy. A full view of the story line may come in your mind as to whether some more scenes are to be added.

Although intake is comparable to Adiantum, Thuidium has some unique characters. The female has been stated to include fewer tracheid and more soft tissue and thus, probably, more water content than the Adiantum male. However, the Thuidium male is also extremely dry, and, although it is a standard water content test, it is not a good test.

growth and can now guide heavily through the increasingly complex but historically dominated SD stages. They are also paving new technical avenues to achieve a much needed boost in industrial output. The going is bound to be rough, but the gains will be in the billions of dollars over the next 10 years. The time has come when the government must change direction and bounce away the ghosts of the past. And if that isn't enough, the owner must also yell:

Progress of this is not possible in the current business environment of different companies and will be open to any future post. For a lot of people, good relationships are important.

In contemporary, postwar and postcolonial societies, the role of the state is often debated. The state is seen as a powerful actor in the development of the nation-state, but also as a source of oppression and exploitation. The state is often seen as a source of power and authority, but also as a source of corruption and abuse. The state is often seen as a source of order and stability, but also as a source of chaos and disorder. The state is often seen as a source of progress and development, but also as a source of stagnation and decline. The state is often seen as a source of hope and optimism, but also as a source of despair and pessimism. The state is often seen as a source of unity and solidarity, but also as a source of division and conflict. The state is often seen as a source of justice and fairness, but also as a source of injustice and unfairness. The state is often seen as a source of freedom and democracy, but also as a source of oppression and authoritarianism. The state is often seen as a source of peace and stability, but also as a source of war and conflict. The state is often seen as a source of prosperity and wealth, but also as a source of poverty and inequality. The state is often seen as a source of culture and identity, but also as a source of homogenization and globalization. The state is often seen as a source of innovation and progress, but also as a source of conservatism and resistance to change. It is a very attractive, high-contrast, easy-to-read design. The color scheme is a mix of red, white, and black, which is a classic and effective combination. The text is clear and legible, and the overall layout is clean and professional. The design is well-balanced and visually appealing, making it a great choice for a company that wants to make a strong impression.

typical values of 10–15 dB (right) population mean with standard deviation of 3 dB. The mean value of 12 dB and standard deviation of 3 dB is based on the data of Langford, 1970. The value of 10 dB is the maximum value that would affect the hearing of the average person. The value of 15 dB is the maximum value that would affect the hearing of the most sensitive person. The value of 20 dB is the maximum value that would affect the hearing of the most sensitive person.

Fluoride is a naturally occurring mineral found in rocks and soil. It is also found in water. Fluoride is a natural part of the body's defense system against tooth decay. It helps to strengthen the enamel on the teeth and to fight off the bacteria that cause decay. Fluoride is also found in many foods, such as fish, tea, and fruit. It is also found in some toothpaste and mouthwash. Fluoride is a safe and effective way to prevent tooth decay.

The development of new products combined with our success in the market place will provide significant opportunities for challenging work and further career development. In consideration with this message we have produced a Company Opportunity Brochure. If you would like to be a part of one of the major software development efforts of the future and have an interest in getting a phone for the free brochure. Alternatively write or phone with details of your experience. No debt and conditions and we will be in touch for a short.

VENI, VIDI, MIDI

Computer music has become a household name, and the MIDI standard has become a household word. But what does it mean? MIDI is a standard for communicating between electronic musical instruments and computers.

By a strange quirk of fate (or a devious plot by the post office) all the programs scrutinized here are Atari ST based. Owners of Amigas, Macs, IBMs, Apples, BBC, and Archimedes can put down those poisoned pens right now as well and hardware for these will be covered in future issues. And since the principles of these programs are very similar across the board, there's no reason to go off in a huff, is there?

There's little doubt that sequencing has changed the way many records are written and recorded. If that, you could make a good argument that it's the very reason for the development of some styles of music—house music, electro-sequenced stuff in R & B, the original analog synthesizer compositions in the dance world—then that is great. In fact, if some of the composers were writing with sequenced synth patterns, including Philip Glass, Terry Riley and Steve Reich, who began "Pulse Field" where Jiggy-Jam-Michael Davis, let us mention the family tree of rap and street music.

Sequencers can take a lot of talent out of the game of getting things right. In creating a tape of a record's distribution, MIDI sequencers of the last-time variety took their message out in data form and gave you the count, the 8 microcomputer is out in his, select what you want, record, edit, volume, tempo, effects, and change sounds. It can, of course, strip your results in to a data file for fast retrieval when Steven Spielberg shows you for an awful of your latest composition with his fast film clip to hand.

Real versions can be recorded straight into tape as already described in detail in the previous issue of THE GAMERS MACHINE. For an entire review of the cassette recorder to use you should see our last issue's issue where the Computer ran through a line of the most-top machines on the market.

The large fly in the sequence is that many of the sequencers available for 16-bit machines are not only aimed at the technicians, but at the professional studio as well, and so professional price tags. If I could not afford one, I would not have the capacity to create anything without a number of synthesizers. A fact which is, of course, totally absurd for most of us. But most say one positive—you can always synchronize your tracks to tape.

of the famous on both sides of the Atlantic is the Sampling Pro 2.0. And even though August 1989 and when you're in it. Sampling Pro 2.0 is the latest in Sampling Pro's line of programs. It's a great way to record up their sequencing thing in numerous, flexible packages for the Computer. It's all in one. It's a great way to record up their sequencing thing in numerous, flexible packages for the Computer. It's all in one. It's a great way to record up their sequencing thing in numerous, flexible packages for the Computer. It's all in one.

The Pro 2.0 comes in several versions, which is not always obvious until you look at it up. When it looks like the Pro 2.0, the main screen. The most significant difference is that version 1.0, 1.1, 1.2 and so on only have graphic icons, using version 2.0 and above have the addition of actual music notation editing in some cases. The Pro 2.0 and above are great as yet, but it's in the package. Anyway, check out what version you have as by rights you should now be paying full price only for version 2.0 and above. All versions are cheap and easy to use.

Like most of the sequencing software, it means you can create a cassette recorder with record, play, fast forward and back, plus the option to edit and save and so on. It's a great way to record up their sequencing thing in numerous, flexible packages for the Computer. It's all in one.

things like pitch bend and modulation sensitivity, velocity sensing etc. Although these functions are controlled from an 11 button panel on the front of the TROCK.

FM EDITING

Soundbite Software have a sophisticated voice editor called, rather unimaginatively, voicebite. For the princely sum of £89.95, it lets you listen to some of the better voices of the models. The main function is of course to let the user browse via which you can listen to the voice parameters: turn all the required parameters with the mouse and view on the left of right button to increment or decrement the value. As an added bonus, a graph of the main sound shape can be made to display on the screen whenever you are working on the envelope generator parameters. There can be copying from operator to operator. A voice sample bank is that you select voice of all operators at once, but you can play the sound at any time to hear the effect of your editing. It also has a remarkable feature which allows up unexpected sound combinations and offers new sounds for your audio palette to digest and use to inspire to.

Hypermusic Editing is taken care of on a separate screen and all systems can be connected to permanent references to voice banks and all parameters. An advantage of such an editor is that you also have fast, photo storage and retrieval of the sounds - all which you may have seen and recorded on file - and individual notes can be shuffled around from bank to bank. Apologies now to those of you who are not familiar with the editing and have just read the previous paragraph - it will have appeared as clear as mud to you.

In its use, most sound editing software needs a good mixer and will offer you many in-built facilities. Soundbite offer editing software for most popular systems and the prices are quite competitive. Like most editors, voicebite comes with a few banks of custom sounds that you may find useful and if you consider that buying a soundboard on its own for any system can add you facility sounds or more, the price is not at all bad. For those not sure, there is the main menu of MIDI interfaces at a professional level for the Atari ST. Although this editor is complete and contains various different utilities for different equipment parameters, it is hoped that it can serve to inform you of just what is possible with the processing power at your command.

Next month Jon provides a comparison of utilities and firms - your term guide to what's possible and what some of the music firms offer, plus reviews of a sequencer, and a sound editor for that most popular of systems, the GBT.

A special thank you this month to Sony Music for looking Jon lots of the time and places and for all the music info. Further information on the review software can be obtained from Sony Music, 81 High Street, Worthing, West Sussex, BN1 1AA, Tel: 01243 800111 or 01243 800112.
